 4 or R&D supplies, so you're not able -- you're never
5 going to be able to map any of these to a specific
 6 product and that's why we have the accounting
7 structure that we have. We look at the product cost
8 and then the other costs and these should all tally

10
         Q. Okay. Then if you look at the allocations
11 for the parent accounts, what are allocations and 12 how are they calculated?
        A. Sorry. Where are the allocations?
        Q. I think it's if you search for 15 "17-Allocations."
16
        A. These are allocations based on accounting
17 treatment. As an example, the first instance of 18 allocations is depreciation expense -- depreciation
                                                           18

22 Mr. Pak, I'm disappointed, frankly, at your word,
23 not to mention you're going over seven hours today,
                                                           24
24 but so be it.
